

Present Offensive Keeps 8th Army From 'Going Soft'

IN KOREA, Oct. 1—Gen. James A. Van Fleet said today one of the reasons for the Summer and Fall Korean campaigns is to keep his Eighth Army from going soft.

The outspoken field commander declared he had three main objectives in his Summer campaign in which the Communists lost the "just fantastic" number of 188,237 men in four months.

The objectives were:

1. "I felt I had to reduce the enemy's potential in that area (the eastern front) to prevent a possible offensive."
2. "I wanted to shorten our line in the mountains and drive the enemy from commanding terrain."
3. "The Eighth Army had to remain active. If any army doesn't practice, it becomes soft. Then, if the enemy hits, it can't defend itself."

Van Fleet said Eighth Army losses in the bitter fighting on Heartbreak Ridge have been "moderate."

"But," he added, "in comparison to the good that has been done, they have been extremely light."

He said the Communists are using "sucker tactics" in attempting to defend Korean mountain peaks. Van Fleet explained:

"The Communists have been suckers. They've thrown in counterattacks up to two regiments in size. And our artillery has mowed them down."

"They have been so frantic to retain the position that their casualties have been just fantastic."

After his public announcement of the beginning of the Allied Autumn offensive, Van Fleet predicted that the Communists will probably fight a defensive war in "the foreseeable future."

"We are still better than they are," the Eighth Army commander asserted during the interview in which he said that the Allies did not increase their strength substantially, because they did not need to.

"He needed to build up—I didn't," summarized Van Fleet.

The soft-spoken, 59-year-old general circled on his battle map four giant Communist buildup areas facing the Allies on the western, central and eastern fronts. He said:

"As a whole, he (the enemy) has a potential for a major offensive."

"But his current actions point to a continued defense... at least for the foreseeable future."

Before the Summer offensive began, Van Fleet said, the Communists literally were looking down on the main Eighth Army supply routes in the east. He added:

"You couldn't go one hundred yards in front of our line without running into the enemy. As someone said last Spring, we were eyeball to eyeball over there."

Aluminum Lack Cited

Civilian Goods Cutback Seen

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Production of autos and other civilian goods was seriously threatened today by the power shortage in the Pacific Northwest which already has substantially cut aluminum output.

Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson said the government would have no choice but to reduce consumer durable goods production further if the aluminum situation does not improve.

Wilson outlined the problem in his third quarterly report which said the nation is on the verge of volume production of military items for the first time since the start of the mobilization program.

The defense mobilizer said "the period of greatest stringency" in the metals supply has arrived but added that the copper and aluminum situation threatens to worsen the situation considerably.

WILSON ESTIMATED the country lost 55,000 tons of copper during work stoppages during the Summer in the U. S. and Chile, but said aluminum output will drop 20 percent—100,000 tons—in the next six months unless the power shortage is ended.

The mobilization director declared the government is taking all actions possible to alleviate the power problem and he voiced confidence that the program will succeed.

Wilson said a heavy rainfall in the next few weeks would help

Early Winter Not Coming Here, Birds 'Tell' Man

Predictions and fears of an early Winter were set aside Monday by an observer of nature in Circleville.

Charles Garner of West High street pooh-poohed the fears of weathercasters who have been predicting an early, severe Winter this year.

"There are two robins building a nest in my back yard now," Garner said. "If there was an early Winter coming, they wouldn't be nestin' g."

Garner said that the robins generally leave here between Sept. 20-30 about every year.

"You can't fool them birds," Garner said. "Nature tells them when there will be bad weather."

Garner said the robins in his back yard are mating and apparently settling down to a long, mild Winter here.

NEW YORK IS ALL AGOG

Dodgers Leading Giants In National Loop Playoff

EBBETT'S FIELD, Oct. 1—The Brooklyn Dodgers held a 1-0 lead over the New York Giants here today as the two teams battled in a two-best-out-of-three series for the privilege of meeting the New York Yankees in the 1951 World Series.

The lone tally came as the Dodgers' Andy Pafko poled out a homerun in the second.

Inning-by-inning play follows:

FIRST INNING

New York: Cox went back to the third base stands to take Stankey's foul. Dark fled to Snider. Mueller bounced to Hodges. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Brooklyn: Hearn took Furillo's high bouncer and threw him out. Reese slammed a single to left. Mays went deep to take Snider's fly. Reese went down stealing. Westrum to Stankey. No runs, one hit, no errors, none left.

SECOND INNING

New York: Irvin flied to Furillo. Reese went back to take Lockman's popout. Thomson fouled to Cox. Nothing across.

Brooklyn: Robinson flied to Mays. Thomson threw out Campanella. Pafko belted a homerun into the lower leftfield stands. Hodges popped to Thomson. One run, one hit, no errors, none left.

A sellout crowd stormed Ebbets field—and 6,000 of them knocked down a gate getting in—to see the Giants and the Dodgers start their playoff.

The wild-eyed crowd, hopped up by the most theatrical season's finish in all history, saw Jim Hearn, of the Giants, oppose Ralph Branca on the pitching mound in the opener of the three-game set.

Hearn entered the game with a record of 16 and nine against Branca's 13 and 10. The Giants were slight favorites in the betting just before the opening pitch.

The winner of the playoff will face the New York Yankees, the American League champions, in

Ohio Woman 'Adopts' 200 GIs In Korean War

IN KOREA, Oct. 1—A Cleveland woman has adopted the men of Company D of the 21st "Gimlet" Regiment in Korea and she takes good care of the morale of her 200 "adopted sons" by showering them with presents.

A huge package arrives each month from Mrs. L. Lumley, full of cookies, candy and books, and the men gather around to share the contents.

Mrs. Lumley told the men in her first letter and package that she heard frontline soldiers were in need of good books and cookies and she decided to adopt one infantry company as her own.

The packages usually contain a note from the kindly woman, which usually reads: "Here's a few more books and goodies for my boys; lots of luck and may God bless you all."

"It's swell when people like 'Mom' Lumley take time out to send us packages," said one soldier who corresponds with the company mother. "She sure keeps our morale up."

Leaders Rap News Screen

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 1—Forty-three of the nation's top newspaper leaders have lashed out against President Truman's recent news-screening edict and warned that "the American people are in danger of losing their right to freedom of information."

The group declared that the people must be informed of what government (national, state and local) is doing so public officers will be their servants and not their masters.

The group criticized Mr. Truman's recent executive order which imposed new security regulations on information handled by civilian federal agencies.

Congress Eyes Taxes

Joint Committee Seeking Accord

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Congress prepares today to draft the final form of a new multi-billion dollar tax increase amid rising demands for economies in government expenditures.

Chairman George (D) Ga. of the Senate Finance Committee predicted that a House-Senate conference committee will reach a full agreement on the new tax measure by the end of this week.

The House was to name its conferees today. The Senate has already appointed its conference group. The conference committee is expected to meet tomorrow or Wednesday to begin the task of adjusting differences between tax bills passed by the two houses.

The Senate last Friday passed a $5.5 billion tax-boost bill, with a 11 percent income tax increase for most taxpayers.

THE HOUSE has approved a $7.2 billion measure carrying a 12 and one-half percent income tax increase.

The conferees can approve

County Counts 6th Death From Traffic Mishaps

Dwight L. Cathel, 26, of Orient Route 1 died at 1:30 a. m. Monday in Mt. Carmel hospital, Columbus, of injuries suffered in a two-car accident at the junction of Routes 62 and 762 near Harrisburg Friday evening.

It was the sixth traffic fatality for Pickaway County this year.

The accident took place when a car driven west on Route 762 crossed Route 62 in the path of another auto operated by William J. Carlton Jr., 20, of Wooster.

The Cathel car was spun around by the impact and sent backwards into the yard of Darby Tavern where it collided with a steel pole.

Cathel was taken to Mt. Carmel hospital where attaches reported he had suffered a basal skull fracture and brain concussion.

He was born in Pickaway County July 5, 1925, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Cathel of Orient Route 1. He is survived by the parents and a grandfather, John Bowshier of Orient Route 1.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday in Norris Funeral home, Grove City, with the Rev. Charles Tarney of Orient Methodist church officiating. Burial will be in Darbyville cemetery.

Friends may call in the funeral home.

UN READY TO STRIKE, REDS WARNED IN KOREA

U.S. MAPPING ROLE AS MEDIATOR

UN Council To Seek Accord To British-Iran Oil Dispute

FLUSHING MEADOW, Oct. 1—The United Nations Security Council will attempt today to find a compromise solution to the ominous Iranian oil dispute. The United States mapped a mediator's role, seeking an agreement, "which will do justice" to Iran and Britain.

When the council opens its meeting at mid-afternoon it will act specifically on a British resolution calling on Iran to abide by a ruling of the International Court of Justice handed down July 5.

The court urged the Iranian government to permit Britain to continue operations of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. facilities pending settlement of the nationalization dispute.

Britain also requested that Iran be restrained from expelling 317 British technicians from the huge refinery at Abadan. The Britons have been ordered to leave by Thursday.

The chief British delegate, Sir Gladwyn Jebb, who flew to New York last night, will present Britain's case to the council, expanding on the British thesis that Iran's policies threaten to cause "irreparable damage" to the oil facilities, endanger life and property and "cause distress to the areas concerned."

Jebb on his arrival held conferences with British diplomats and American Delegate Ernest A. Gross.

Gross, who met yesterday with French and British officials, said last night:

"Our policy has been and continues to be based on the hope that an agreement can be reached between the parties which will do justice to both. Our efforts in the UN will be directed toward this objective."

Before the council comes to a decision, Jebb's arguments are expected to be opposed personally by Premier Mohammed Mossadegh, but when the Iranian head of government will fly to the United States has not yet been announced.

He is expected to declare that Iran's decision to nationalize the oil properties is an internal affair and outside the jurisdiction of the UN.

Presiding at the meeting today is Joao Carlos Muniz of Brazil, October chairman of the council. Iran, not a council member, will not be invited to the horseshoe table until after an agenda is adopted.

Representatives were aware of a strong possibility that Soviet Delegate Semyon Tsarapkin may declare that the council's procedure constitutes "Anglo-American intervention in Iranian internal affairs."

Delegates are keeping in mind that Tsarapkin may veto any decision which goes against Iran.

Bradley, Ridgway Tour War Front

TOKYO, Oct. 2—(Tuesday)—Generals Omar N. Bradley and Matthew B. Ridgway flew to the Korean front Monday as a United Nations broadcast said Allied forces are "prepared to strike" for victory on the battlefield.

Indicating a climax is nearing in the suspended armistice conference negotiations, a broadcast by the "Voice of the United Nations Command" said the Eighth U. S. Army will not "sit idly by" if the Reds delay a decision on the cease-fire issue much longer.

BUT OMINOUS new anti-American threats came from Communist China and the top Chinese Red generals called upon his troops to fight on.

The UN broadcast—not an official statement by Ridgway's headquarters—declared "the whole issue of the resumption of the talks is one that cannot be hedged much longer."

It asserted that if the Reds "wish to get on with the war on an all out scale" then the UN army is "poised and prepared to strike."

The broadcast said, however, that there is still hope for peace and added:

"The time taken by the Reds to ponder Gen. Ridgway's proposal to change the conference site to Songhyn indicates that the Communist war lords realize the gravity of the situation."

Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Ridgway, UN supreme commander, toured the frontlines and talked with field officers immediately after landing in Korea from Japan.

At the same time, Red China's top military man, Gen. Chu H. Teh, accused the United States

British Leaving Iran

Oil Firm Complies With Nation's Order

TEHRAN, Oct. 1—The Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. announced today that the 300-odd British oil technicians ordered expelled from Iran will be evacuated Wednesday morning.

The announcement said the Britons will board the British Cruiser Mauritius and a destroyer armada now anchored off Abadan in Iraqi waters. They will be taken to Basrah, Iraq, and then to England, Iraq, and then to England, out by Thursday.

At the same time of the British evacuation, 350 Indian and Pakistani employees of the AIOC were taken by sea from Abadan harbor.

Meanwhile, Iranian Premier Mohammed Mossadegh, solidly backed by his parliament, prepared to wage a "fight against imperialism" in the UN Security Council.

The British press reported that the Shah of Iran's private plane—a Flying Fortress—was standing by, ready to fly the ailing premier to the United States.

A MACHINIST, Frank Capizzi listens to testimony at the Los Angeles coroner's inquest into the death of Harry Salmons, a fellow-employee, who was shot to death after he played a series of practical jokes on Capizzi. Jurors were told how Salmons hid Capizzi's chair and tools, put grease on the handles of his machine and poured oil on his bench. The dead man's wife, Ethel, sits in rear, her head on the shoulder of her father, Scott Rarick. Soon after, the coroner's jury found Capizzi "criminally responsible" for Salmons' death.

First Atomic Troop Maneuvers Set For Blasts In Nevada Desert

LAS VEGAS, Oct. 1—Preparations for history's first atomic troop maneuvers were in their final stage of planning today.

The maneuvers, designated "Operation Desert Rock," will be staged within the next few days on the Atomic Energy Commission's Nevada test range, 65 miles northeast of here.

The operation will revolve around a battalion of infantry and the use of five or six detonations of sub-critical size atomic weapons.

Five thousand troops are now on the Nevada range in readiness for the military historic maneuvers.

Plans call for them to move into field positions, dig fox holes and generally prepare for battle. Then they will be withdrawn to positions of safety and recording instruments will be installed in their fox holes and gun positions.

This will be followed by the firing of the atomic weapons. The instruments will record such things as the heat, the blast wave, the radio-activity and the general damage.

From the recordings army experts will calculate the number of casualties which would have been suffered had the troops been in their battle positions.

5 Drunk Drivers Lose Permits In Hearings Here

Five persons lost their driving licenses in Pickaway County common pleas court Monday after pleading guilty to accusations of drunken driving.

A sixth man was sentenced to jail for driving after his permit had been suspended. He is George Bunn, 30, of Columbus. He was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to Pickaway jail for 60 days. He was arrested on Route 23 Sunday by Patrolman Wells.

In addition to suspending their driver's permits for drunken driving Judge William D. Radcliff fined each of the following $10 and costs and sentenced each to 30 days in Pickaway jail, but suspended the jail terms:

Ira Dadds, 40, of Portsmouth, arrested on Route 23 Friday by State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells. His license was suspended for one year.

Leonard N. Bowles, 27, of Coalfork, W. Va., arrested on Route 23 Friday by State Highway Patrolman N. J. McClurg. His license was suspended for one year.

of blocking revival of the long-stalled armistice conference.

The Red Chinese commander-in-chief called on his army to continue the "struggle for the defense and security of the motherland."

His utterance came a few hours after Radio Peiping broadcast a manifesto summoning all Asian peoples to rise and drive America entirely out of the Orient.

THE RED HIGH command maintained a four-day-old silence on Ridgway's bid to move the suspended cease-fire negotiations out of Kaesong and renew them in a nearby no man's land.

Gen. Chuh, second only to President Mao Tse-tung in China's Communist hierarchy, charged that "American imperialism obstructs the armistice talks."

The Red military chief sounded his warnings in an "order of the day" issued to his millions of troops to mark the second anniversary of the founding of the Peiping regime.

As quoted by the Red radio, Chuh claimed that "American imperialism occupies" Formosa and "has concluded a one-sided treaty with Japan which threatens the peace of the Far East and the whole world."

Meanwhile, Allied troops seized two more hills in East-Central Korea and American pilots hit four Red jets in a fresh outbreak of air fighting involving 67 planes.

One Russian-type Mig jet was shot down and three others damaged over Northwest Korea by Sabrejet fighters.

The American jets suffered no damage, but the Fifth Airforce admitted tonight that 14 Allied planes were lost during September.

THESE INCLUDED one Sabre, one Thunderjet and one F-51 propeller-driven craft shot down by Red fighters.

On the ground, Rok (Republic of Korea) infantrymen captured the third crest of an elevation west of "Heartbreak Ridge" Monday after a hand-to-hand battle in the east-central sector.

A dispatch from that sector said tonight the "seesaw fighting raged until a North Korean battalion was forced to flee north."

Other Rok troops meanwhile captured a height northwest of the "punchbowl" area in the same sector.

Along "Heartbreak Ridge" itself and in the central sector, Banzi-shouting Red troops struck anew at United Nations hill positions.

Fanatical bands of North Korean Reds launched a new series of small-scale probing thrusts Sunday night against American and French infantrymen entrenched on the slopes of "Heartbreak Ridge."

All these attacks were beaten off in sharp firefights as rain and strong winds swept the east front, causing some damage to UN supplies but not a great deal, according to officers.

On the central front, Chinese Reds renewed their four-day banzi assault on a towering hill Sunday after falling back from three previous attacks and leaving 1,466 counted dead behind.

Bonds Forfeited By Three Drivers

Three men forfeited bond totalling $45 in Circleville mayor's court last weekend.

Losing their bonds when failing to answer traffic violation accusations were Earl Eugene Swackhamer, 19, of Laurelville, $5 bond for allegedly running a red light and $10 on an accusation of driving without an operator's license; Percy Hill, 24, of Columbus, $10 on an accusation of operating without a license; and Dennis Karn Jr., 23, $20 for alleged reckless operation.

Boyle's Finances To Be Eyed By Senate Probers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Senate influence probers begin checking today the bank accounts and income tax returns of Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle.

Staff members believe that these records will determine the truth or falsity of charges that Boyle accepted $8,000 in fees from the American Lithofold Corp. of St. Louis, after it obtained loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

Meanwhile, Guy Gabrielson, who is to appear before the Senate probers Thursday, promised to quit as Republican national committee chairman and "get out of the party" altogether if any "smell" is uncovered in connection with an RFC deal he sponsored.

Gabrielson insists that an $18.5 million loan he secured for his Carthage Hydrocol Corp., was a "straight business deal" and had nothing to do with his being GOP chairman.

Gabrielson said he never received a fee for securing the RFC loan, "but, of course, received a retainer for representing the company in all its dealings."

Pet Larceny Here Involves Five Persons

Pickaway County authorities Monday were investigating a case of pet larceny.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff said he has taken a 'coon dog into custody following an ownership suable involving at least four persons.

The dog, held at the Pickaway County dog pound for safekeeping, is claimed by a Columbus man, who said the pet was stolen from him in 1949.

Radcliff said the dog was found on a Pickaway County farm, but that the local man states he traded for the pet.

"We checked with the man he said he traded with, and that man said he got the dog in a trade with another man. The other man, however, said he had never seen the dog."

Local Soldier Is Honored For Work In School

Pvt. Edgar M. Webb of Circleville has the distinction of being the only one in a class of 51 candidates to graduate from the clerical school of the 3rd Armored Division in Ft. Knox, Ky.

The Circleville soldier, who entered the Army May 24, was commended by Col. F. J. Gillespie, commanding officer. He was graduated from the rigid instruction course last Friday.

Webb was graduated by Circleville high school in 1947 and worked with the Pickaway County Farm Bureau until leaving for the Army.

His wife is Mrs. Louise Bowsher Webb of 510 East Main street, and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Webb of Long avenue.

Wilson declined comment on how far civilian production would drop next year, but charts in his reports indicated output will fall about as much as it will this year.

In reporting on the over-all mobilization situation, Wilson said: 1. Inflation in the United States and Communist expansion overseas present the most serious perils as the country pushes ahead with the defense program.

2. Congress should pass a $10 billion tax bill and tighten credit controls on home buying and durable goods to reduce the inflation threat.

3. The mobilization program has become a $100 billion operation with deliveries in July through September expected to amount to $5 billion, one-third over the preceding quarter and four times the delivery rate a year ago.

Three Persons Pay Total Of $85 In Fines

Three persons were fined a total of $85 and costs in Circleville courts last weekend for traffic violations.

Heading the list was Forest Underwood of Lancaster, who was fined $50 and costs in the court of Mayor Thurman I. Miller for being in actual physical control of his auto while drunk.

Underwood was arrested by State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells on Route 104.

Jimmie Garrett of Detroit was fined $15 and costs in mayor's court for passing in a no-passing zone on Route 23. He was arrested by Wells, also.

Phyllis Bevins, 18, of Ashville Route 2, was fined $10 and costs in the court of Magistrate Oscar Root for reckless operation and another $10 and costs for driving without a license.

She was fined on accusations filed by both Deputy Sheriff James Diltz and by O. F. Seimer.

Truce-Talk Resumption Is Delayed

of blocking revival of the long-stalled armistice conference.

The Red Chinese commander-in-chief called on his army to continue the "struggle for the defense and security of the motherland."

His utterance came a few hours after Radio Peiping broadcast a manifesto summoning all Asian peoples to rise and drive America entirely out of the Orient.

THE RED HIGH command maintained a four-day-old silence on Ridgway's bid to move the suspended cease-fire negotiations out of Kaesong and renew them in a nearby no man's land.

Gen. Chuh, second only to President Mao Tse-tung in China's Communist hierarchy, charged that "American imperialism obstructs the armistice talks."

The Red military chief sounded his warnings in an "order of the day" issued to his millions of troops to mark the second anniversary of the founding of the Peiping regime.

As quoted by the Red radio, Chuh claimed that "American imperialism occupies" Formosa and "has concluded a one-sided treaty with Japan which threatens the peace of the Far East and the whole world."

Meanwhile, Allied troops seized two more hills in East-Central Korea and American pilots hit four Red jets in a fresh outbreak of air fighting involving 67 planes.

One Russian-type Mig jet was shot down and three others damaged over Northwest Korea by Sabrejet fliers.

The Americanjets suffered no damage, but the Fifth Airforce admitted tonight that 14 Allied planes were lost during September.

THESE INCLUDED one Sabre, one Thunderjet and one F-51 propeller-driven craft shot down by Red fliers.

On the ground, Rok (Republic of Korea) infantrymen captured the third crest of an elevation west of "Heartbreak Ridge" Monday after a hand-to-hand battle in the east-central sector. A dispatch from that sector said tonight the "seesaw fighting raged until a North Korean battalion was forced to flee north."

Other Rok troops meanwhile captured a height northwest of the "punchbowl" area in the same sector.

Along "Heartbreak Ridge" itself and in the central sector, Banal-shouting Red troops struck anew at United Nations hill positions.

Fanatical bands of North Korean Reds launched a new series of small-scale probing thrusts Sunday night against American and French infantrymen entrenched on the slopes of "Heartbreak Ridge."

All these attacks were beaten off in sharp firefights as rain and strong winds swept the east front, causing some damage to UN supplies but not a great deal, according to officers.

On the central front, Chinese Reds renewed their four-day banal assault on a towering hill Sunday after falling back from three previous attacks and leaving 1,466 counted dead behind.

Bonds Forfeited By Three Drivers

Three men forfeited bond totalling $45 in Circleville mayor's court last weekend.

Losing their bonds when failing to answer traffic violation accusations were Earl Eugene Swackhamer, 19, of Laurelville, $3 bond for allegedly running a red light and $10 on an accusation of driving without an operator's license; Percy Hill, 24, of Columbus, $10 on an accusation of operating without a license; and Dennis Karn Jr., 23, $20 for alleged reckless operation.

either the House or Senate rates, or write provisions of their own which will be mid-way between.

George declared they should finish their task in ample time to permit the new increase to go into effect Nov. 1.

Meanwhile, Chairman Doughton, (D) N. C., of the tax-originating House Ways and Means Committee said that if President Truman wants another tax increase next year he should "set an example" by cutting government expenditures.

Doughton led off in a demand for economies that was echoed in both chambers.

Sen. O'Mahoney, (D) Wyo., said that since the Senate fell short of the President's recommendation for a $10 billion tax boost, Congress must "face the fact by reducing appropriations wherever possible."

O'Mahoney declared that "a substantial reduction of expenditures must be made if we are to approximate balancing the budget."

Sen. Flanders, (R) Vt., speaking on the "Meet Your Congress" radio program, declared the Senate Finance Committee, of which he is a member, is "disturbed" by the present scale of expenditures and feels that taxation is now "nearing the limit."

Sen. Moody, (D) Mich., declared there has been "too much shadow boxing" on the spending and tax issues, and that the only way effectively to economize is to set up adequate staffs in the appropriations committee to search properly for savings.

How To Stay Healthy During Coming Winter

Editor's Note: Winter—with its colds, chills, flu, its dearth of sunshine and healthful exercise—will soon be here again. And with Winter comes the problem of how to stay healthy with very little help from the elements. The article that follows is the first of five giving valuable advice on what the average person can do during the winter months to guard the health of himself and his family. The articles were written by the editors of Cosmopolitan magazine.

There is no need, when Winter drives you indoors and out of the sun, to lose that wonderfully alive feeling of summertime, or to let your Summer health fade.

With proper care of yourself and your family, you can keep as fit as you please all Winter long. It's just a matter of knowing what to do, and doing it.

For instance, there is the matter of rest. Sleep is vital to your healthy winter. Legend has it you need eight hours' sleep a night. Regard this merely as an average figure. You may need more. Or you may be one of the lucky ones who are refreshed and rarin' to go after only six or seven hours. Your body will tell you if you are getting enough sleep.

HEALTHFUL sleeping requires a quiet, dark, well-ventilated room; a hard mattress that gives you thirty-six to thirty-nine inches of sleeping space; blankets light in weight, heavy in warmth, not tucked in so tightly that you're strait-jacketed; bedroom windows open, at both top and bottom if you don't have cross-ventilation.

The United States Children's Bureau says children's sleep requirements are as follows: Birth to six months, 20-22 hours; six months to a year, 16-18 hours; one to two years, 14-16 hours; two to five years, 13-15 hours; five to eight years, 12 hours; eight to eleven years, 11 hours; eleven to thirteen years, 10-12 hours; thirteen to fifteen years, 11-13 hours.

Helpful hints for suffering insomniacs: Cultivate the art of relaxation all day long. Muscular tension is one of the main causes of sleeplessness, and freedom from tension can be consciously learned.

Above all, in the hour before bedtime refuse to worry or fight or get angry or try to solve your problems.

Most people sleep best when their stomachs are practically empty. However, a light snack or a glass of warm milk before bedtime may help you fall asleep. Try relaxing for a half hour or so in a "neutral bath"—water at body temperature. Afterward, pat the body dry with a towel. Do not rub. Then climb between the sheets and consciously relax every part of your body.

CLEANLINESS is important, too. That means scalp, hair, face, teeth, mouth, hands, fingernails, and the rest of your body. Scrub your hands before eating. Every night before retiring, brush hair and scalp vigorously.

City Transit Trouble Ends

COLUMBUS, Oct. 1—A new contract containing an eight-cent hourly pay boost and other advantages today averted a threatened tieup of transportation in Columbus.

More than 400 members of the Transport Workers Local 208 (CIO) accepted the offer of the Columbus Transit Co. yesterday. A new contract will be signed later this week.

The company also began operating today on the new 10-cent cash fare ordinance voted last week by city council.

Parents Of 5 Die In Crash

PORTSMOUTH, Oct. 1 — Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Alley, both 30, of Hunting Run, some 15 miles northeast of Portsmouth, were killed late yesterday and their five children injured when the family car rolled down a 20-foot embankment near their home.

Alley's car left a narrow dirt road five miles northeast of Lucasville when he pulled over to permit another car to pass and the wheels of his own vehicle struck a soft shoulder.

London Prison Farm's Goof Ball Supply Cut Off

LONDON, O., Oct. 1—Some inmates of London Prison Farm today had to look for another outside source for their "goof balls," lift-giving benzedrine tablets.

Prison officials said the arrest of John Aiello, 23, of Cleveland snapped the source for a dope-peddling ring which included an inmate and two inmate nurses.

Assistant Superintendent Victor J. Monte said a search of Aiello, who was suspected for some time, elicited 503 tablets. They were packaged and bound with adhesive tape on his leg.

Aiello was fined $50 and costs and sentenced to three months in Madison County jail.

Monte said the tablets retail for five cents but bring as high

Fox Is Killed Near Capital

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Their coats weren't pink, they followed no hounds; their mount burns gas, not hay, but a couple of Washington cops have a fox as a trophy today.

The fox, three feet long and weighing 25 pounds, made two mistakes. First, it ventured into the urban reaches of the District of Columbia. Second, it tried to cross the street as the police car came along and was ignominiously killed by an ignominious weapon—a tire.

Policemen Edwin M. Bruce and Richard C. McCargar say they plan to have Reynard mounted.

Religion Keeps Brothers From Joining Union

TOLEDO, Oct. 1—Two 45-year employees of the N.Y. Central Railroad are out of jobs today because religious beliefs prevented them from joining a union.

Cornelius H. Delamotte and his brother, Charles, said their membership in the Plymouth Brethren religious sect forbids them to join the AFL Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and engineers. They worked as hostlers moving engines in the Stanley yards in Toledo.

The union has a closed shop agreement with the yard requiring all workers to become members.

Several alternatives were suggested to the brothers, including a plan to pay dues without having their names on the roll. But Cornelius turned down the idea, saying he could be contributing to the union and "I can't hide that fact from God, even though I might from my fellowmen."

The Delamottes said they are forbidden to join the union by Chapter Six, Verse 14 of Paul's second epistle to the Corinthians:

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers, for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness, and what communion hath light with darkness?"

200-Pound Hogs To Be Popular

CHICAGO, Oct. 1—A University of Illinois expert says both overfished and underfished hogs are likely to sell at larger than usual discounts this Fall.

with 200 pounders bringing the best prices.

That is the hog outlook for this season forecast by W. J. Willis, livestock marketing specialist.

He pointed to the second largest pig crop on record and the lighter world demand for fats and oils this year.

Willis says there will be more fats available and possibly a weaker lard market, which probably means more price differential for type in live hogs.

How To Stay Healthy During Coming Winter

Editor's Note: Winter—with its colds, chills, flu, its dearth of sunshine and healthful exercise—will soon be here again. And with winter comes the problem of how to stay healthy with very little help from the elements. The article that follows is the first of five giving valuable advice on what the average person can do during the winter months to guard the health of himself and his family. The articles were written by the editors of Cosmopolitan magazine.

There is no need, when winter drives you indoors and out of the sun, to lose that wonderfully alive feeling of summertime, or to let your summer health fade.

With proper care of yourself and your family, you can keep as fit as you please all winter long. It's just a matter of knowing what to do, and doing it.

For instance, there is the matter of rest. Sleep is vital to your healthy winter. Legend has it you need eight hours' sleep a night. Regard this merely as an average figure. You may need more. Or you may be one of the lucky ones who are refreshed and rarin' to go after only six or seven hours. Your body will tell you if you are getting enough sleep.

HEALTHFUL sleeping requires a quiet, dark, well-ventilated room; a hard mattress that gives you thirty-six to thirty-nine inches of sleeping space; blankets light in weight, heavy in warmth, not tucked in so tightly that you're strait-jacketed; bedroom windows open, at both top and bottom if you don't have cross-ventilation.

The United States Children's Bureau says children's sleep requirements are as follows: Birth to six months, 20-22 hours; six months to a year, 16-18 hours; one to two years, 14-16 hours; two to five years, 13-15 hours; five to eight years, 12 hours; eight to eleven years, 11 hours; eleven to thirteen years, 10-12 hours; thirteen to fifteen years, 11-13 hours.

Helpful hints for suffering insomniacs: Cultivate the art of relaxation all day long. Muscular tension is one of the main causes of sleeplessness, and freedom from tension can be consciously learned.

Above all, in the hour before bedtime refuse to worry or fight or get angry or try to solve your problems.

Most people sleep best when their stomachs are practically empty. However, a light snack or a glass of warm milk before bedtime may help you fall asleep. Try relaxing for a half hour or so in a "neutral bath"—water at body temperature. Afterward, pat the body dry with a towel. Do not rub. Then climb between the sheets and consciously relax every part of your body.

CLEANLINESS is important, too. That means scalp, hair, face, teeth, mouth, hands, fingernails, and the rest of your body. Scrub your hands before eating. Every night before retiring, brush hair and scalp vigorously.

Always make sure that everything coming in contact with your scalp is clean—comb, brush, bobby pins and fingernails.

Oily hair should be shampooed once a week; dry, brittle hair, once every two weeks. A pure olive-oil shampoo is good. Dry your head immediately afterward to prevent chilling. An electric hair-dryer is helpful for avoiding that winter cold.

Save face with common-sense measures. If you have an only skin, wash your face with a pure soap once a day; if your skin is unusually dry, cut down on the number of soaps, use a very mild soap, and oil your skin occasionally before washing.

As for that daily bath or shower, it's fine for most people most of the year, but not so good for all people during wintertime. The natural oil of the skin is washed away in the bath, and in the winter some skins tend to become dry and itchy. If this holds true for you, cut down your baths to four a week.

See your dentist. And while you're there, ask him about the value of applying sodium fluoride solution to your children's teeth to curb decay. Brush your teeth after every meal! Use a good toothpaste or powder on a fresh, dry brush. Everyone should have two tooth-brushes, so that one is always dry and ready for action. A tooth tip: A raw apple after meals cleanses the teeth.

(Next: Exercise and ventilation.)

COFFEE AND DIVORCE

NATIONAL Association of Coffee Roasters comes forward with the announcement that 92 percent of American homes now serve coffee regularly. At the same time coffee men take credit for the slight reduction in the divorce rate, declaring the increased use of coffee is responsible.

A cup of coffee, three or four times a day, it is asserted, sort of soothes the nerves and lessens the tension.

However this may be, the fact remains the American people have become a race of coffee drinkers. Many large concerns give employees time off at least twice a day for coffee. Coffee making has been improved through education and modern facilities. It has been said facetiously that the typical American breakfast consists of a cup of coffee and a cigarette.

It is quite possible there is less thought of divorce if the coffee is above reproach.

WHY SWIM THE CHANNEL?

THOSE who have read with interest various accounts of the achievement of Miss Florence Chadwick, the American girl who swam the English Channel "both ways," find it a fair question to ask: "Why?"

Was it for glory alone, although it is difficult for the average individual to see in that accomplishment glory to any great extent? Among swimmers, of course, the feat is undoubtedly regarded as the supreme achievement, and to that extent could be considered worth the effort.

Miss Chadwick is a stenographer, with a fondness for swimming.

BLACKMAIL

APPARENTLY the pattern of blackmail established when the U. S. government paid hundreds of thousands of dollars "ransom" to effect the release of Vogeler from an Austrian prison is to be followed by the Czechoslovakian puppet regime in meeting U. S. demands for the release of William Oatis, imprisoned newsman.

Ambassador Vladimir Sneezeagain, the new Czech ambassador, said at a news conference negotiations for the release of Oatis might be possible if Washington quits its political and economic warfare against Czechoslovakia. How much cash the Stalin stooges in Prague would want in addition he did not say in his first "feeler."

Our public schools present the world's most prodigious project to perfect people.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Purcell McKamey of Steelton, Pa., wrote me a long and interesting letter, the gist of which is:

"From the spelling of your name, it is to be assumed that your origin is of Polish or Russian; is it that you are psychologically affected by this background to the extent that you use your column to try and prove how much you are against anything Russian or Communist?"

"Are you fair in your attacks upon people who have the will and right to their thoughts regardless of how they may disagree with yours or others?"

The why of all this is quite simple.

In 1917, when Russia rebelled against the czar and his court, against the power of Rasputin and the corruption of nobility, the many, like myself, felt that free, representative government, that liberty had pierced the last great autocratic country. Turkey had become a free country in 1908; China in 1911; now Russia had joined the march.

I was then a student at Columbia university and sought for means to go to Russia to fight and labor for liberty. I got a job as a correspondent, sailed on the old Oscar II and after a short stay in Sweden, arrived in Petrograd. There I became editor of the Russian Daily News, an English language newspaper.

As a working newspaperman, charged with the task of reporting daily on events and publishing them in the city which was then the capital of the country, I had many opportunities to come close to the situation as it developed.

I witnessed the struggles of Kerensky against both the Communists and the Czarists. I was present at the seizure of power by the Bolsheviks. I saw Lenin, Trotsky and Stalin (who was then not so important) at close quarters. I had to understand the movements which were influencing millions of human beings. I lived under the Communists from October 1917 to March 1918.

The heartbreak of it was that there was no will for liberty among the Marxists. They only sought power. Their own phrase for it was that they "took power."

I was present at all the sessions of the constituent assembly which had been called before the Bolsheviks took over. They laughed at the idea of the elected representatives of the people determining the basic law of the country. They sent sailors to break it up.

I witnessed the suppression of every organ of the people—the church, the press, meetings, political parties. Quickly they restored the despotism of the czars. It was a despotism without restraint.

Human freedom was a value which I had taken for granted. I was born in the United States where I had never felt the force of government on my back like a lash. I knew no class, no race, no religious struggle. My father went to his synagogue on the Sabbath and we children walked behind him, as our Irish and German neighbors went to their churches on Sunday. In America, even God could be taken for granted.

It was in Siberia that the question of God and country and human liberty became an issue that had to be worked out. I had seen the degradation of man. I had seen men and women who did not fear death, but who did fear life.

Psychotherapy Found Helpful When Swallowing's Difficult

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FROM time to time swallowing becomes painful, difficult, and even impossible for the victim of a condition known as cardiospasm. These symptoms are caused by spasm of the valve between the esophagus and the stomach.

The cause of the sudden clamping and tightening of this muscle is unknown, though recently much evidence has come to hand indicating that psychological factors play an important role. For instance, the vomiting after meals, which is such an outstanding symptom of the disorder, becomes worse when the patient is nervous or upset, and is less prominent when he is in a calm frame of mind. The vomiting in some cases may become so severe as to require hospitalization and feedings intravenously, that is, by giving fluids into a vein instead of by mouth.

Follows a Pattern

The patient with cardiospasm is likely to follow a rather definite psychological pattern so far as his emotional make-up is concerned, preferring to "give in" rather than to argue, and to keep his emotions pretty well bottled up. Many times, it is the person who, on the surface, appears to be leading a calm and well-adjusted life, who has the deepest conflicts and emotional upsets.

Again, the individual may be a perfectionist—neat, orderly, and meticulous about his activities, or he may lack energy, be very sensitive, and easily offended. He may have great difficulty in forgiving once he is offended, and may harbor resentment for long periods within himself. He may be shy and bashful, but likes to be well thought of. Such an individual may go to extreme degrees to avoid arguments.

Psychotherapy Used

Treatment consists in removing the psychological condition that may be responsible for the attack. Recently, a group of patients was treated with psychotherapy with good results.

Sometimes, the spasm may become so severe that it may be necessary to dilate the valve between the esophagus and stomach by physical means. This is usually performed by passing a string into the intestine and then passing different size beads down the string until the opening between the esophagus and stomach is enlarged.

The giving of drugs to relieve the spasm may also be of value. However, the treatment requires correction of the psychological factors causing the spasm.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

H. T.: Is there any relation between multiple sclerosis and arteriosclerosis?

Answer: Multiple sclerosis is a serious disorder of the nervous system, the cause of which is unknown. Arteriosclerosis is a hardening of the arteries, and is an entirely different condition.

The University of Michigan is the scene of the Hopwood Literary Awards; the occasion for an annual invasion of the campus by hopeful publishers' representatives, waving contracts in one hand and bottles of Scotch in the other. Recently, however, pickings have been on the thin side, and the entries have become increasingly salty.

Professor Warner Rice told me of the evening he found one of his instructors deeply engrossed in a book. Rice noted that the book was the Kinsey report on "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male." "I didn't know you found that subject so fascinating," joked Rice. The instructor explained, "It isn't that. I'm just tapering off from the Hopwood Awards."

The late W. C. Fields, not noted for sobriety, once was asked if he ever had suffered delirium tremens in Hollywood. "That's impossible to answer," rasped the comedian. "It's impossible to tell where D.T.s end and Hollywood begins."

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

HARRISON BLAYDE was grateful for the business emergency that called him to South Carolina late in October.

From the hour that the Garden Hill house was deeded to Gaines, living had been an unrelenting strain and an increase of tension. Edna, retreating into stony martyrdom, had made every move a difficult add to Harrison's already added burden to Harrison's already crushed and suffering conscience. Deliberately, against his protests, she had sold things she prized, making of the gesture a kind of frenzied flagellation of herself before his eyes.

Two days before he was due to leave for the south, Harrison spent Sunday with his family. The hotel room was littered with Sunday papers. Deke was sprawled on the floor with the funnies. They had eaten a dispirited dinner, half-vegetables followed by sad blobs of ice cream drowned in chocolate sauce. The coffee was weak, the water warm. Anne was listless, and as soon as they returned from dinner she curled up on her bed with a book and promptly went to sleep.

Harrison sat in a rigid chair, of that breed found only in hotels, leaving the armchair with the one lamp for Eden. She brought some knitting and became silently absorbed in it. The room grew very still except for Deke's grunts and rattlings.

"Teck!" the boy exclaimed presently. "This place is like a funeral. Let's go somewhere, Pop."

"All right," Harrison put aside the paper he had been reading abstractedly and with little comprehension. "The car's outside. We'll all go. The country ought to be pretty right now. Put down that knitting, Mother. Wake Anne up, Deke."

"You all go; I'd rather stay here," Eden said tonelessly.

Anne sat up, pushing back her rumpled hair. "I don't feel like going out—really I don't, Dad," she said.

"I'm not going," Eden announced very firmly.

"Aw, gee gosh!" Deke shouted. "You women make me sick. Come on, Pop, let's go and leave 'em to mope around all over the place."

"What's the matter with Anne, Deke?" Harrison asked when he and the boy had driven a little way out of town. "Is she sick?"

"No, she ain't sick! You want to know what's the matter with her? She's in love!"

"Well, she's eighteen now. Time for that to begin. Who is it—some football captain or other?"

"No, it ain't. It's an old man—almost as old as you. It's that Jim Elliot."

fraction of an inch. "Jim Elliot?"

"Yeah, ever hear of anything so corny? She's been crazy about him a long time—ever since he sold our house. Then after we moved down to the hotel, she found out he was living there. So every night she goes drifting down to the lobby, all dreamy, and wanders around waiting to see him. Last night he told her he was going to church today—anyway, I reckon he told her, for she got up early and got all dressed up and made me go too—only we didn't go."

"Why not?"

"Well, just when we get almost to the church door, who do we see but ole man Elliot beaunting Aunt Laura into church! So Anne says she feels sick and let's go home, and she's been moping around ever since. She was crying in my room and I asked her what was busted, and she almost snapped my head off. Can you imagine—an old man like that?"

"Elliot isn't so old, Deke." A sick distress was tightening in Harrison's stomach. Elliot had seemed a decent chap—but a married man and his little Anne! "Let's get some ice cream and go back, Deke," he said. "Let's see if we can't pep the gals up a little."

Edna was apathetic when Harrison announced his plan to be away for a week. Anne gave him a quick, unhappy look, then evaded his eyes. She was pale and quiet, helped Harrison pack the clothes he would need, told him good-bye when he left for the plant without any display of emotion.

"I left a check on the dresser and I'll pay the hotel bill before I leave," he said. "Hold things steady, Anne. And you behave yourself, Mister. Don't worry your mother. Good-bye, Edie." Their kiss, a cold, dutiful peck, made Anne's mouth twist and she looked away.

It was nine o'clock on Tuesday before he got away from the plant. His car stood in the yard, a thin drift of sawdust on the windshield. He wiped it away, then opened the rear door to put his grip in and jumped back, dropping the suitcase.

"What the devil!" he exclaimed. Anne uncured herself from the floor in front of the rear seat. Her face was white, her eyes were defiant.

"I'm going with you! And don't say I can't go because I'm going."

"How'd you get here?" he demanded.

"Walked. I sneaked a bag out last night while Mother and Deke were at the movies. I mailed Mother a note this morning. She'll get it this afternoon. I told Harberson at school that I had to go with you because you weren't very well and we were worried about your heart."

Stalemate at Kaesong Reveals Reds' Purpose

Russ, Chi-Red Dallying Spurs Allied Rearming

WASHINGTON—The stalemate Kaesong peace talks have served at least one good purpose. They have convinced United Nations leaders that Russia and Red China don't really want peace in Asia now and therefore the Allies must continue to build up their military forces to avoid a third world war.

The moribund peace talks have not been cancelled for only one reason. Neither side wishes to bear the onus of being the one formally to end the negotiations, and this purely for propaganda reasons.

From the beginning of the talks in July, the administration was cautious as to the outcome, but it was inevitable that the American public should get rising hopes for an end to the fighting. This public reaction stirred fears in official minds that a successful termination of the negotiations would result in a general letdown in public support for the rearmament program. Now that fear is largely dissipated because of the Communist stalling tactics.

● IKE'S POSITION—Republican leaders now say that there is no question of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's willingness to accept the GOP presidential nomination if he can get it at his own terms. Eisenhower will have no part of any mud-slinging campaign, but if things go his way, he will pledge himself to a hard-hitting battle.

assurances just back from talks with the general in Europe define the terms this way:

- 1—There must be a legitimate move at the Republican convention to draft Eisenhower.
- 2—The men who are fostering his candidacy must make no deals of any kind, patronage or otherwise.
- 3—Eisenhower will have no part of any mud-slinging campaign, but if things go his way, he will pledge himself to a hard-hitting battle.

4—The general will refuse to have anything to do with any such behind-the-scenes strife as marked the unsuccessful attempt to deprive New York's Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of the 1948 nomination.

● ACHESON-MARSHALL FEUD—Even though they got along well together in public life, it's possible that Secretary of State Dean Acheson had a good deal to do with the sudden retirement of Gen. George C. Marshall as Defense secretary.

Marshall was making plans to attend the Ottawa meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Council, and Acheson's only part in the proceedings apparently was to indicate that he thought this would be inappropriate.

Acheson's argument was that Marshall would be an overwhelming military figure who would have no counterpart at the meeting and might give the impression the United States was trying to run the show.

However, word from the State department was late in coming to Marshall and his plans for going to Ottawa were well advanced when he learned of Acheson's views on the trip.

Since his retirement was already set up, Marshall apparently decided to retire immediately. It is certain that his departure was sooner than he had planned 24 hours before his resignation was announced.

● MORE DISAGREEMENTS—Other high-level disagreement developed recently in Washington. This arose in the copper wage dispute and proved to be a major factor in the nation-wide strike.

Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson and some Wage Stabilization Board members are reported to be angry at Cyrus S. Ching, director of the federal conciliation service. The copper companies are said to be mad at Ching also and Ching, in turn, is nursing a peeve at Wilson.

It all developed when Ching proposed a compromise plan for settlement of the wage dispute. Ching's proposal would have given an average 16-cent an hour pay boost to Kennecott Copper corporation employees.

At this point, it is rumored; Wilson advised the firm not to accept the Ching proposal. The Defense mobilizer and Wage Stabilization Board members both felt the proposal would damage the wage stabilization program.

COFFEE AND DIVORCE

NATIONAL Association of Coffee Roasters comes forward with the announcement that 92 percent of American homes now serve coffee regularly. At the same time coffee men take credit for the slight reduction in the divorce rate, declaring the increased use of coffee is responsible.

A cup of coffee, three or four times a day, it is asserted, sort of soothes the nerves and lessens the tension.

However this may be, the fact remains the American people have become a race of coffee drinkers. Many large concerns give employees time off at least twice a day for coffee. Coffee making has been improved through education and modern facilities. It has been said facetiously that the typical American breakfast consists of a cup of coffee and a cigarette.

It is quite possible there is less thought of divorce if the coffee is above reproach.

WHY SWIM THE CHANNEL?

THOSE who have read with interest various accounts of the achievement of Miss Florence Chadwick, the American girl who swam the English Channel "both ways," find it a fair question to ask: "Why?"

Was it for glory alone, although it is difficult for the average individual to see in that accomplishment glory to any great extent? Among swimmers, of course, the feat is undoubtedly regarded as the supreme achievement, and to that extent it could be considered worth the effort.

Miss Chadwick is a stenographer, with a fondness for swimming.

BLACKMAIL

APPARENTLY the pattern of blackmail established when the U. S. government paid hundreds of thousands of dollars "ransom" to effect the release of Vogeler from an Austrian prison is to be followed by the Czechoslovakian puppet regime in meeting U. S. demands for the release of William Oatis, imprisoned newsman.

Ambassador Vladimir Sneezeagain, the new Czech ambassador, said at a news conference negotiations for the release of Oatis might be possible if Washington quits its political and economic warfare against Czechoslovakia. How much cash the Stalin stooges in Prague would want in addition he did not say in his first "feeler."

Our public schools present the world's most prodigious project to perfect people.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

Purcell McKamey of Steelton, Pa., wrote me a long and interesting letter, the gist of which is:

"From the spelling of your name, it is to be assumed that your origin is of Polish or Russian; is it that you are psychologically affected by this background to the extent that you use your column to try and prove how much you are against anything Russian or Communist?"

"Are you fair in your attacks upon people who have the will and right to their thoughts regardless of how they may disagree with yours or others?"

The why of all this is quite simple.

In 1917, when Russia rebelled against the czar and his court, against the power of Rasputin and the corruption of nobility, the many, like myself, felt that free, representative government, that liberty had pierced the last great autocratic country. Turkey had become a free country in 1908; China in 1911; now Russia had joined the march.

I was then a student at Columbia university and sought for means to go to Russia to fight and labor for liberty. I got a job as a correspondent, sailed on the old Oscar II and after a short stay in Sweden, arrived in Petrograd. There I became editor of the Russian Daily News, an English language newspaper.

As a working newspaperman, charged with the task of reporting daily on events and publishing them in the city which was then the capital of the country, I had many opportunities to come close to the situation as it developed.

I witnessed the struggles of Kerensky against both the Communists and the Czarists. I was present at the seizure of power by the Bolsheviks. I saw Lenin, Trotsky and Stalin (who was then not so important) at close quarters. I had to understand the movements which were influencing millions of human beings. I lived under the Communists from October 1917 to March 1918.

The heartbreak of it was that there was no will for liberty among the Marxists. They only sought power. Their own phrase for it was that they "took power."

I was present at all the sessions of the constituent assembly which had been called before the Bolsheviks took over. They laughed at the idea of the elected representatives of the people determining the basic law of the country. They sent sailors to break it up.

I witnessed the suppression of every organ of the people—the church, the press, meetings, political parties. Quickly they restored the despotism of the czars. It was a despotism without restraint.

Human freedom was a value which I had taken for granted. I was born in the United States where I had never felt the force of government on my back like a lash. I knew no class, no race, no religious struggle. My father went to his synagogue on the Sabbath and we children walked behind him, as our Irish and German neighbors went to their churches on Sunday. In America, even God could be taken for granted.

It was in Siberia that the question of God and country and human liberty became an issue that had to be worked out. I had seen the degradation of man. I had seen men and women who did not fear death, but who did fear life.

Psychotherapy Found Helpful When Swallowing's Difficult

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

FROM time to time swallowing becomes painful, difficult, and even impossible for the victim of a condition known as cardiospasm. These symptoms are caused by spasm of the valve between the esophagus and the stomach.

The cause of the sudden clamping and tightening of this muscle is unknown, though recently much evidence has come to hand indicating that psychological factors play an important role. For instance, the vomiting after meals, which is such an outstanding symptom of the disorder, becomes worse when the patient is nervous or upset, and is less prominent when he is in a calm frame of mind. The vomiting in some cases may become so severe as to require hospitalization and feedings intravenously, that is, by giving fluids into a vein instead of by mouth.

Follows a Pattern

The patient with cardiospasm is likely to follow a rather definite psychological pattern so far as his emotional make-up is concerned, preferring to "give in" rather than to argue, and to keep his emotions pretty well bottled up. Many times, it is the person who, on the surface, appears to be leading a calm and well-adjusted life, who has the deepest conflicts and emotional upsets.

Again, the individual may be a perfectionist—neat, orderly, and meticulous about his activities, or he may lack energy, be very sensitive, and easily offended. He may have great difficulty in forgiving once he is offended, and may harbor resentment for long periods within himself. He may be shy and bashful, but likes to be well thought of. Such an individual may go to extreme degrees to avoid arguments.

Psychotherapy Used

Treatment consists in removing the psychological condition that may be responsible for the attack. Recently, a group of patients was treated with psychotherapy with good results.

Sometimes, the spasm may become so severe that it may be necessary to dilate the valve between the esophagus and stomach by physical means. This is usually performed by passing a string into the intestine and then passing different size beads down the string until the opening between the esophagus and stomach is enlarged.

The giving of drugs to relieve the spasm may also be of value. However, the treatment requires correction of the psychological factors causing the spasm.

H. T.: Is there any relation between multiple sclerosis and arteriosclerosis?
Answer: Multiple sclerosis is a serious disorder of the nervous system, the cause of which is unknown. Arteriosclerosis is a hardening of the arteries, and is an entirely different condition.

Recently, however, pickings have been on the thin side, and the entries have become increasingly salty.

Professor Warner Rice told me of the evening he found one of his instructors deeply engrossed in a book. Rice noted that the book was the Kinsey report on "Sexual Behavior in the Human Male." CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

HARRISON BLAYDE was grateful for the business emergency that called him to South Carolina late in October.

From the hour that the Garden Hill house was deeded to Gaines, living had been an unrelenting strain and an increase of tension. Eden, retreating into stony martyrdom, had made every move a difficulty and every hardship an added burden to Harrison's already crushed and suffering conscience. Deliberately, against his protests, she had sold things she prized, making of the gesture a kind of frenzied flagellation of herself before his eyes.

Two days before he was due to leave for the south, Harrison spent Sunday with his family. The hotel room was littered with Sunday papers. Deke was sprawled on the floor with the funnies. They had eaten a dispirited dinner, half-warm chicken with flavorless vegetables followed by sad blobs of ice cream drowned in chocolate sauce. The coffee was weak, the water warm. Marshall was making plans to attend the Ottawa meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Council, and Acheson's only part in the proceedings apparently was to indicate that he thought this would be inappropriate.

Acheson's argument was that Marshall would be an overwhelming military figure who would have no counterpart at the meeting and might give the impression the United States was trying to run the show.

However, word from the State department was late in coming to Marshall and his plans for going to Ottawa were well advanced when he learned of Acheson's views on the trip.

Since his retirement was already set up, Marshall apparently decided to retire immediately. It is certain that his departure was sooner than he had planned 24 hours before his resignation was announced.

● MORE DISAGREEMENTS—Other high-level disagreement developed recently in Washington. This arose in the copper wage dispute and proved to be a major factor in the nation-wide strike.

Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson and some Wage Stabilization Board members are reported to be angry at Cyrus S. Ching, director of the federal conciliation service. The copper companies are said to be mad at Ching also and Ching, in turn, is nursing a peeve at Wilson.

It all developed when Ching proposed a compromise plan for settlement of the wage dispute. Ching's proposal would have given an average 16-cent an hour pay boost to Kennecott Copper corporation employees.

At this point, it is rumored, Wilson advised the firm not to accept the Ching proposal. The Defense mobilizer and Wage Stabilization Board members both felt the proposal would damage the wage stabilization program.

BPW Club's Annual Public Affairs Dinner Features Talk On 'Responsibility'

Four Women Made Members

"The job ahead is a very serious one. All women are desirous of peace and security—and that is the job of all women."

That is the opinion of Mrs. Ray Davis of Montclair avenue, speaking to Circleville Business and Professional Woman's Club annual public affairs dinner which was held Thursday evening in Pickaway Arms.

In her address entitled "Full Partnership for the Job Ahead," the speaker also said that "women should be proud of what they are doing, and the future is a challenge. Full partnership means that women should forget personal ambition, self seeking; they should assume responsibility, be happy and willing to work for the things needed in our own community."

Mrs. Davis also said that "great progress is being made, but there is a need for women to grow up in a hurry and assume responsibility as citizens."

Preceding the featured speaker, Miss Rose Good, president of the local group, held a short business session when the following women were voted in as members: Mrs. Richard Jones, Miss Jean Eitel, Mrs. Bernadine Hott and Miss Marie Moreshouse.

Mrs. Erma Stevenson gave an explanation of Business Women's week and also introduced the speaker.

Ned Mapes To Play Again

A mixture of favorite songs of yesterday and today, keyed to a mood of danceable tempos will be offered by Ned Mapes and his orchestra, returning to Pickaway Country Club Saturday night.

Mapes and his orchestra will be augmented by vocal choruses by Judy Jordan, Freddy McNulty, the Three Notes and the Glee Club.

Mapes and his orchestra have played ballrooms, hotels, country clubs, and college proms with considerable success. They have enjoyed the favor of dancers of all ages with their ability to play sweet ballads and brisk novelties.

Washington Grange Holds Inspection

John Dowler was the inspecting officer when Washington Grange met Friday evening for its annual inspection.

Following the ritual and business meeting, conducted by David Bolender, master, a program was presented including:

A piano solo by Dorothy Glick, a playlet, with a cast consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Leist, Loring, Weta Mae and Carol Leist, David Bolender and William Thomas and a vocal duet by Carol and Weta Mae. A film, "Waves of Green," was shown by Larry Best.

At the next meeting, Oct. 12, Nebraska Grange will confer the third and fourth degrees.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lands and their committee served refreshments to 60 members and juveniles.

Twelve Guests, All Cousins Meet For Dinner

Mrs. Irvin Smith of Reading, Pa., was the honored guest when Mrs. A. J. Dunn of Bexley entertained eleven guests, all cousins, with a dinner party Sunday evening in Mrs. Root's Party Home in Columbus. Mrs. Smith is a house guest of Mrs. Dunn's.

Others present for the occasion were: Mrs. R. P. Reid of West Corwin street, her sister, Mrs. F. S. Jacoby of Columbus, Mrs. Forest Klamforth and Mrs. Robert Codner, both of Groveport, Mrs. W. H. Knox, Mrs. S. Martin Gladwell, Mrs. T. S. Simms, Mrs. J. O. Freese, Mrs. Eleanor Oglesby and Miss Mary Neuner, all of Columbus.

Following dinner, the group reassembled in the Dunn home, 151 Broadleigh Road, where they spent the evening.

Hospital Guild Buys Drainage Pump For Berger

Berger Hospital Guild 6 met Thursday evening in the home of Mrs. Dave Horn with Mrs. Marvene Turner as assisting hostess.

Mrs. G. Guy Campbell, chairman, presided at the business meeting where plans were made for a new fund raising project.

Mrs. Warren Baker reported a drainage pump had been purchased for the hospital.

The evening was spent in playing games and prizes were won by Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Thelma Pierce. Refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Next meeting will be held Oct. 12, in the home of Mrs. Pierce.

Navy Boss Is Lauding Doughboy

Foot Soldier Still Deciding Factor

NEW YORK, Oct. 1 — The Chief of Naval Operations said today the foot soldier is still the deciding factor in war, and he expressed the hope that an old-fashioned "balance of power" might keep the individual fighter out of battle.

Adm. William F. Fechteler, top uniformed man in the Navy, asserted before the National Security Industrial Association meeting that atomic weapons, guided missiles, and other new developments might yet make war, if it comes, cheap and easy.

But, Fechteler added, such a situation is not yet in sight.

Fechteler said that while nuclear fission, employing the atom bomb, "provides the most powerful explosive yet devised" and while "its power may well be increased, the all-purpose weapon has not yet been found."

Fechteler said he hoped that the new weapons might not be used. He declared that perhaps a balance of arms might yet keep the world from destructive combat.

The Navy chief said:

"I RECALL with considerable hope and confidence the effectiveness of the European balance of power which kept the world at peace from the termination of the Napoleonic wars to the beginning of World War I—a period of about 100 years."

If no peaceful balance of power can be achieved, Fechteler said, the burden of war in the foreseeable future will fall on the fighting individual because "even in this modern age a soldier heaves his grenade in the same way his prehistoric ancestor threw a rock."

Fechteler added that despite atom bombs, airplanes and guided missiles "the closer these men and machines approach the target, the more accurate is their delivery. At best they are within range of enemy counter-action."

Pvt. Goldsberry Starts Training

Pvt. Gail E. Goldsberry, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Goldsberry of Stoutsville has completed processing at Fort Meade, Md., and is assigned to the 101st Airborne Division, Camp Breckinridge, Ky., for Army basic training.

He will receive eight weeks training in basic military subjects necessary for all soldiers. This will include qualification firing with the carbine or M-1 rifle.

The last eight weeks of the 16-week course will cover advanced individual subjects and the basic fundamentals of his arm or service.

Ohio Fire Chiefs Select Officers

MANSFIELD, Oct. 1 — Fire Chief Robert Young of Youngstown is the new president of the Association of Ohio Fire Chiefs today, succeeding Chief Raye Earle of Massillon.

The association elected new officers in the closing session of a three-day meeting here Saturday. Some 355 chiefs and their wives attended.

Assistant Chief Tom Brightwell of Dayton was elected secretary-treasurer; Chief Walter Hydaker of Lima, vice-president; and Chief William Rosche of Canton, assistant secretary-treasurer.

OPPORTUNITY SCHOOL Better - Late - Than - Never Scholars Catch Up On Missed Education

W. H. Paul saw six of seven sons graduate from high school. Now he's getting grade school education denied him as a boy.

By HENRY LESENE
Central Press Correspondent

WEST COLUMBIA, S. C.—Better-late-than-never scholars, from 16 years of age to 70, go to school in a college-like atmosphere here, either to learn to read and write or to work toward a high school diploma and to go on to college or even earn a Ph.D. A whole family can attend, including grannies, and there's a nursery for the kiddies. The state supported school, probably the nearest thing of its kind in this country to the folk schools of Europe, is the culmination of a lifetime's work by a bustling and energetic woman, Dr. Wil Lou Gray. She has devoted her life to adult education and the Opportunity School, as it is called, is her brain child.

Not all the students at the Opportunity School get a high school certificate or go on to college, but many do. Some attend only a month at a time, or one or two weeks—their vacation time. But even those who can spare only a few weeks each summer usually keep coming back year after year.

For instance, there is one woman who attended her first summer session in 1934 through the generosity of a cousin who saved soap coupons to pay the small tuition. She has been back five additional summers to pursue her education. The one-month terms in the summer are for those who cannot attend longer.

SINCE the Opportunity School obtained a permanent home here in the former Columbia Air Base with its two and a half miles of corridors, there is an autumn semester of four and a half months and a spring semester just as long.

There are instances of some pupils winning a high school diploma in a few weeks. It all depends on where their formal education left off, and how rapidly they learn.

Here one gets a high school diploma on the basis of what he knows, without having to spend a year in a class for each year of scholastic advancement. A Hungarian war bride advanced from the seventh to the eleventh grade in four months.

The school has produced a minister, a superintendent of a group of cotton mills, nurses, a Red Cross recreational director, a researcher for the Department of Agriculture, a newspaper reporter, and so on—and these from among people who didn't have a chance to get a high school education in their youth.

IN THE 30 YEARS the Opportunity School has been in operation some 7,000 people have been helped to become more useful citizens. The first summer session of the school was held in the mountain community of Tamassee. The pupils were 17 young women below the fifth grade level, who attended day sessions, and 19 young men who attended at night.

Dr. Gray recalls that this truly pioneering adult school opened mostly on hope, and donations of $40, a barrel of flour, and staple groceries in lieu of tuition. The tuition, incidentally, was only $1 for the session. Until the school obtained a permanent home in 1947, the summer sessions were held at some college in the state.

The enrollment in a year now is about 500. In recent years there has been a sprinkling of veterans and their wives. There are apartments at the school for whole families.

The idea of the school is to teach the students "how to live" and "how to make a living," as well as pure academic training. Woodworking, sewing, painting, even ceramics are taught. The classes are informal and the pupils usually advance rapidly once they learn to express themselves.

Teen Tips

Now, the beginning of a new year in school, is the time to check your manners. Why? Everybody likes and respects girls and boys who have good manners, because smooth manners show consideration for others, help avoid embarrassment and hurt feelings.

Introductions — Boys shake hands when they are introduced. Girls may or may not; either is correct. When a girl and a boy are introduced, it's up to the girl to make the first move to shake hands, but it's also correct for her not to shake hands with him at all. Did you know that "How do you do?" is the only correct way to acknowledge an introduction? It is, in spite of what you hear on the radio and TV.

Rise for elders—It's correct and courteous for both boys and girls to stand up when introduced to older people and when their elders enter the room or speak to them for the first time. Of course if you are all seated in the same room, you wouldn't rise every time an older person goes in and out of the room, but it's polite to do it once. Also when you're in a restaurant and older people stop at the table to chat for a moment.

Ready on time—If you are to be called for at 7:30, that's the time to ready. Allow enough

Navy Boss Is Lauding Doughboy

Foot Soldier Still Deciding Factor

NEW YORK, Oct. 1—The Chief of Naval Operations said today the foot soldier is still the deciding factor in war, and he expressed the hope that an old-fashioned "balance of power" might keep the individual fighter out of battle.

Adm. William F. Fechteler, top uniformed man in the Navy, asserted before the National Security Industrial Association meeting that atomic weapons, guided missiles, and other new developments might yet make war, if it comes, cheap and easy.

But, Fechteler added, such a situation is not yet in sight.

Fechteler said that while nuclear fission, employing the atom bomb, "provides the most powerful explosive yet devised" and while "its power may well be increased, the all-purpose weapon has not yet been found."

Fechteler said he hoped that the new weapons might not be used. He declared that perhaps a balance of arms might yet keep the world from destructive combat.

The Navy chief said:

"I RECALL with considerable hope and confidence the effectiveness of the European balance of power which kept the world at peace from the termination of the Napoleonic wars to the beginning of World War I—a period of about 100 years."

If no peaceful balance of power can be achieved, Fechteler said, the burden of war in the foreseeable future will fall on the fighting individual because "even in this modern age a soldier heaves his grenade in the same way his prehistoric ancestor threw a rock."

Fechteler added that despite atom bombs, airplanes and guided missiles "the closer these men and machines approach the target, the more accurate is their delivery. At best they are within range of enemy counter-action."

Pvt. Goldsberry Starts Training

Pvt. Gail E. Goldsberry, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Goldsberry of Stoutsville has completed processing at Fort Meade, Md., and is assigned to the 101st Airborne Division, Camp Breckinridge, Ky., for Army basic training.

He will receive eight weeks training in basic military subjects necessary for all soldiers. This will include qualification firing with the carbine or M-1 rifle.

The last eight weeks of the 16-week course will cover advanced individual subjects and the basic fundamentals of his arm or service.

Ohio Fire Chiefs Select Officers

MANSFIELD, Oct. 1—Fire Chief Robert Young of Youngstown is the new president of the Association of Ohio Fire Chiefs today, succeeding Chief Raye Earle of Massillon.

The association elected new officers in the closing session of a three-day meeting here Saturday. Some 355 chiefs and their wives attended.

Assistant Chief Tom Brightwell of Dayton was elected secretary-treasurer; Chief Walter Hydaker of Lima, vice-president; and Chief William Rosche of Canton, assistant secretary-treasurer.

OPPORTUNITY SCHOOL Better - Late - Than - Never Scholars Catch Up On Missed Education

W. H. Paul saw six of seven sons graduate from high school. Now he's getting grade school education denied him as a boy.

By HENRY LESENE
Central Press Correspondent

WEST COLUMBIA, S. C.—Better-late-than-never scholars, from 16 years of age to 70, go to school in a college-like atmosphere here, either to learn to read and write or to work toward a high school diploma and to go on to college or even earn a Ph.D. A whole family can attend, including granny, and there's a nursery for the kiddies.

The state supported school, probably the nearest thing of its kind in this country to the folk schools of Europe, is the culmination of a lifetime's work by a bustling and energetic woman, Dr. Wil Lou Gray. She has devoted her life to adult education and the Opportunity School, as it is called, is her brain child.

Not all the students at the Opportunity School get a high school certificate or go on to college, but many do. Some attend only a month at a time, or one or two weeks—their vacation time. But even those who can spare only a few weeks each summer usually keep coming back year after year.

For instance, there is one woman who attended her first summer session in 1934 through the generosity of a cousin who saved soap coupons to pay the small tuition. She has been back five additional summers to pursue her education. The one-month terms in the summer are for those who cannot attend longer.

SINCE the Opportunity School obtained a permanent home here in the former Columbia Air Base with its two and a half miles of corridors, there is an autumn semester of four and a half months and a spring semester just as long.

There are instances of some pupils winning a high school diploma in a few weeks. It all depends on where their formal education left off, and how rapidly they learn.

Here one gets a high school diploma on the basis of what he knows, without having to spend a year in a class for each year of scholastic advancement. A Hungarian war bride advanced from the seventh to the eleventh grade in four months.

The school has produced a minister, a superintendent of a group of cotton mills, nurses, a Red Cross recreational director, a researcher for the Department of Agriculture, a newspaper reporter, and so on—and these from among people who didn't have a chance to get a high school education in their youth.

IN THE 30 YEARS the Opportunity School has been in operation some 7,000 people have been helped to become more useful citizens. The first summer session of the school was held in the mountain community of Tamassee. The pupils were 17 young women below the fifth grade level, who attended day sessions, and 19 young men who attended at night.

Dr. Gray recalls that this truly pioneering adult school opened mostly on hope, and donations of $40, a barrel of flour, and staple groceries in lieu of tuition. The tuition, incidentally, was only $1 for the session. Until the school obtained a permanent home in 1947, the summer sessions were held at some college in the state.

The enrollment in a year now is about 500. In recent years there has been a sprinkling of veterans and their wives. There are apartments at the school for whole families.

The idea of the school is to teach the students "how to live" and "how to make a living," as well as pure academic training. Woodworking, sewing, painting, even ceramics are taught. The classes are informal and the pupils usually advance rapidly once they learn to express themselves.

Elinor Williams' Teen Tips

Now, the beginning of a new year in school, is the time to check your manners. Why? Everybody likes and respects girls and boys who have good manners, because smooth manners show consideration for others, help avoid embarrassment and hurt feelings.

Introductions — Boys shake hands when they are introduced. Girls may or may not; either is correct. When a girl and a boy are introduced, it's up to the girl to make the first move to shake hands, but it's also correct for her not to shake hands with him at all. Did you know that "How do you do?" is the only correct way to acknowledge an introduction? It is, in spite of what you hear on the radio and TV.

Rise for elders—It's correct and courteous for both boys and girls to stand up when introduced to older people and when their elders enter the room or speak to them for the first time. Of course if you are all seated in the same room, you wouldn't rise every time an older person goes in and out of the room, but it's polite to do it once. Also when you're in a restaurant and older people stop at the table to chat for a moment.

Ready on time—If you are to be called for at 7:30, that's the time to ready. Allow enough time to be ready at the appointed hour.

No personal questions — It's nice to admire your friend's new dress, but don't ask the price of it. It's also bad manners to ask prying questions about personal matters such as which boy she likes best, did he kiss her good-night, etc. Such personal matters concern nobody except the person or people directly concerned. Child Problems and Solutions

By GARY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

In this column I have so often and so strongly urged parents to require their children over six or seven to do some regular jobs about the home, that some of my readers tend to attempt to effect such requirements too early.

Perhaps I have not made clear that requirements, except for some routines, are not easily enforced in the average child under six or seven.

He hardly has had sufficient earlier experience to enable him to profit from a penalty for failing to do an assigned job, especially if it is long and tedious.

A mother writes of her son, 5 1/2: "We give him chores to do once in a while, such as picking up papers from the driveway. He dawdles, taking as much as four or five hours to get it done, crying, making numerous excuses every fifteen minutes, or trying to get his playmates to help him with the job."

"I have recently begun to give him regular jobs," at the same time giving him a weekly allowance of five cents. He is supposed to carry out the garbage and dry silverware, pots and pans twice a day, also make his bed every day. These he does without too much argument or delay. The question is: Should he get the allowance even when he slips up on his work, and should he be allowed to use this money as he pleases?"

IN SUBSTANCE, I replied: Your purposes are excellent but you expect too much of that lad so young. Perhaps you or Dad should help him pick up the papers from the drive. His winning his playmates to help him seems commendable to me.

Though assignment of the regular jobs you name seems a bit early, you appear to be getting pretty good results. You imply that you do considerable urging and arguing to make him do the jobs and earn the reward, which he is sure to get anyway. It would be better to give him the nickel a week as an allowance not in connection with the jobs; otherwise, as he grows older, you will have increasing problems in causing him really to earn the larger portion of money he will need.

Besides, the child paid for regular jobs about the home hardly gains the feeling of being a responsible, sharing member of the family. (My bulletins, "Allowances" and "How To Teach Your Child To Help at Home" may be had in a stamped envelope sent me in care of this paper.)

Perhaps you should let him spend the nickel as he chooses. But if you can prevail on him to keep the nickel he receives this week to put with the nickel he will receive next week in order to get something for a dime, you will have helped him make the most important step in using money wisely.

Unfortunately, most parents think of an allowance as mere pocket money. When the child is seven or eight, his allowance should be budgeted to include the few regular necessary expenditures he will have plus a small amount to do with as he pleases.

Measure your success at teaching him to help at home by the degree to which he does each regular job under his own supervision—without being reminded when to do it or urged to do it. To this end you might consider it wise to omit one or two of the jobs you have assigned him up to now. Most of all, aim to avoid arguing and jawing.

U.S. Navy Has Control Of Seas; Invasion Improbable, Chief Says

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Adm. William Fichteler, chief of naval operations, declared today that the United States cannot be invaded while the Navy has control of the seas.

Fichteler called the Russian fleet of "about 300" submarines the greatest threat to this control. He hinted that the Soviet subs are as good as those with which he said the Germans "pretty nearly" won World War II.

The Navy chief added, however, that an enemy submarine fleet might be bottled up by "fast carrier-plane" attacks against the bases for the underwater craft.

Fichteler also maintained that American carriers could get to within 50 miles of Russia along the entire east coast of Siberia, around the north cape of Norway, in the Archangel and Leningrad area, through the Mediterranean and in the Aegean Sea around Greece.

THE ADMIRAL said carriers sent that close to enemy shores could launch planes able to penetrate as much as 550 miles inland. These aircraft, he pointed out, could deal with enemy planes which might in any way "challenge the control of the sea."

Fichteler also made these other points: 1. Russia has three old battleships, about 15 cruisers and some 45 or 50 destroyers, in addition to "about 300" subs. By the end of 1952, the U.S. will have 12 large fast carriers, about 17 of the "little ones" used for anti-submarine warfare, 19 cruisers, four battleships, about 340 destroyers and destroyer-escort types, the amphibious lift to mount two Army divisions and associated auxiliaries—plus 100 submarines.

2. It is not probable that Russian submarines can launch any guided missiles or airplanes "at this stage of the game."

3. There is little chance that any potential enemy might threaten the U.S. seriously with intercontinental aircraft.

4. The fact that not one of America's 110 carriers operating during World War II was sunk by a bomb dropped by land-based aircraft indicates it would be just as difficult to destroy a carrier with an atom bomb.

5. The Navy has made "marked progress" in its anti-submarine efforts, but "it would be pretty tough going for a while" if about 25 submarines were let loose by the Communists off Korea.

6. An atomic fleet is "conceivable" within "a number of years" but it would probably be cheaper "to build from the bottom up" than to convert today's ships into atomic-powered vessels.

Another State Road Crumbles, Leader Claims

COLUMBUS, Oct. 1—Still another highway—U.S. 3 between Westerville and Mount Vernon—has been brought into the snow-balling row over the breakdown of new road projects.

Clarence L. Wetzel of Lisbon, Republican majority whip in the Ohio house, claims he called for an investigation of the U.S. 3 project after the road began cracking up 90 days after resurfacing with concrete.

He charged over the weekend that he showed Highway Director T. J. Kauer "pieces of cement and photographs" of the highway last April and was promised an investigation that never took place.

Wetzel called for a "state-wide examination" of Ohio roads last Wednesday after Kauer suspended 12 division 11 engineers at New Philadelphia because a new section of U.S. 3 crumbled in Tuscarawas County.

Five-hundred feet of new blacktop broke up under traffic near Newcomerstown 15 minutes after it was opened in late August.

Ten of the engineers were reinstated almost immediately but Charles H. Fritche, assistant division engineer, and E. Hogden Tilton, project engineer, still are under suspension.

ELECTRIC CURRENT STOPS RUST ON SHIPS

By ANDREW R. BOONE

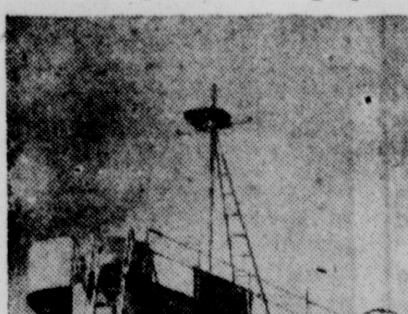

Central Press Correspondent

LONG BEACH, Cal.—Apply a little electricity to the hull of a ship, and the hull will remain almost rust-free.

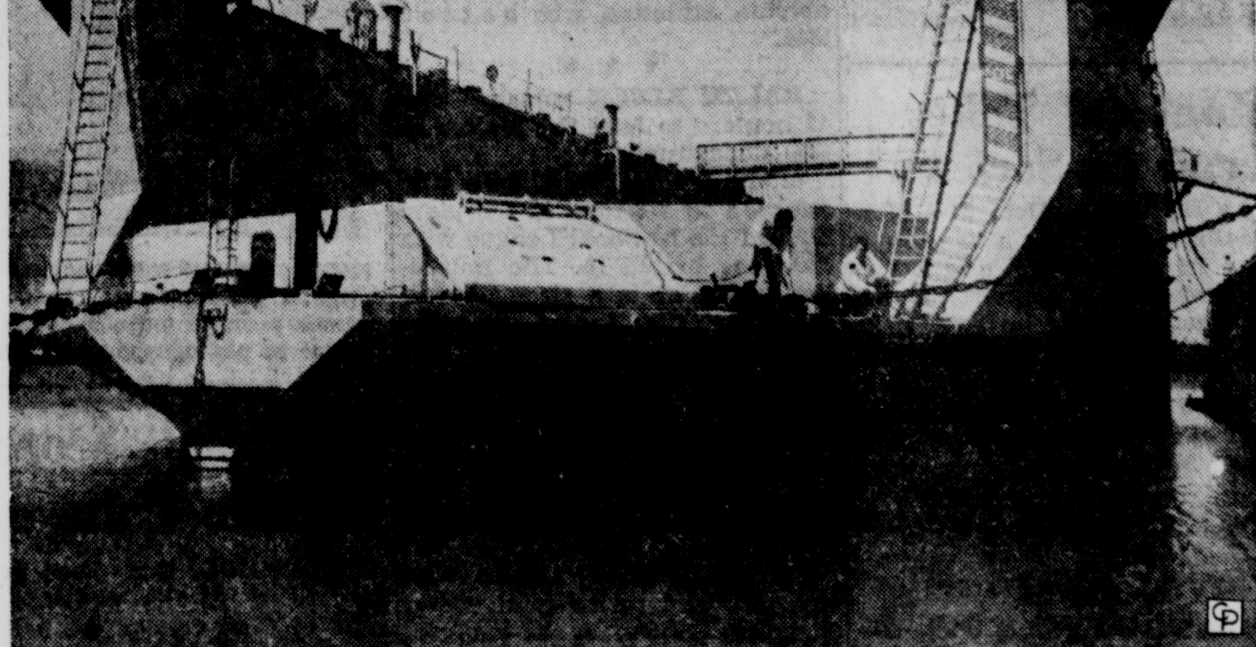

Called cathodic protection, this corrosion-preventive was tried on the Navy's 1,000-ton floating drydock AFDL-12 off Long Beach.

Unlike painting, which requires constant inspection and maintenance, only a small amount of electric current protects the entire underwater hull.

To prepare the ship for the test, a copper line, called a buss, was run completely around her deck. For protection, a graphite

Graphite anode lies on bottom.

A 1,000-ton floating drydock is the cathode of the electrical circuit. Test coupons lowered overboard reveal differences between cathodic protection with small current and none at all.

anode, connected to the buss, was lowered to the bottom of the ocean. An 8-amp. rectifier forced current into the ship, which became the cathode.

Sea organisms attached themselves to the bottom of the ship, but no rust appeared.

Tests proved so successful the U. S. Maritime commission is trying the stunt on vessels at sea. Magnesium anodes that make their own current are used. The Navy is considering laying big anode beds in harbors frequented by its ships. By tying into the anode circuit, a vessel automatically would be protected from rust while berthed.

42 Dopers Due For Hearings

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1—Some 42 persons rounded up in narcotic raids in Northern Ohio will be arraigned today before Federal Judge Charles McNamee in Cleveland.

Sgt. Louis Kopacka, head of the Cleveland police narcotic squad, said two of the prisoners are "important dope peddlers." One was an Akron man believed to be a fugitive from another federal narcotic charge.

St. Louis Turns Clocks 'Ahead'

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1—Much of the nation returned to standard time yesterday by turning clocks back one hour—but not St. Louis.

The good burghers there were advised to set their timepieces eleven hours ahead. The net effect, of course, is the same.

The reason: Watchmakers advise it.

Young Chickens, Apples Due To Be Plentiful

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Agriculture Department specialists report fresh apples and young chickens will be in very heavy supply in October markets.

The peak of the harvest means ample supplies of apples for both cooking and eating, and a heavy carryover of canned apples and applesauce will help increase the totals.

Moreover, the specialists say stocks of processed apples should continue heavy because the largest apple crop this Fall is expected in the northeast—which supplies most of this product to processors.

A supply of young chickens one third larger than a year ago means ample quantities, and fairly low prices for the nation's broiler and fryer consumers.

October markets will also carry large supplies of table grapes this year. The big California crop will furnish such European types as Emperor, Thompson seedless, Tokay and Red Malaga.

Teenage Bible Students Go On Crime Spree

KEARNEY, Neb., Oct. 1—Two teenage Bible students who kidnaped five persons and stole four cars in a three-state crime spree today blamed a movie and "too much religion" for their actions.

The youths, Arnold L. Lingo, 15, of San Antonio, Tex., and Marvin A. Law, 16, of Oshkosh, Neb., pleaded guilty in Buffalo County court to charges of kidnaping and car theft after they were captured near Shelton, Neb.

Young Lingo told officers: "All I ever did when I was home was go to church. I went three times a week and again on Sunday. Religion is not good when you get to fighting it as hard as I did."

The young gunmen said they went to a movie and saw Robert Mitchum portray a gambler "who didn't like cops much."

After the movie they kidnaped a Colorado taxi driver and a motorist, robbed both at gunpoint and pistol-whipped one. Then they continued their crime spree through Kansas and Nebraska until they were cowed by the gunfire of Kearney police.

U.S. Navy Has Control Of Seas; Invasion Improbable, Chief Says

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Adm. William F. Friedman, chief of naval operations, declared today that the United States cannot be invaded while the Navy has control of the seas.

Friedman called the Russian fleet of "about 300" submarines the greatest threat to this control. He hinted that the Soviet subs are as good as those with which he said the Germans "pretty nearly" won World War II.

The Navy chief added, however, that an enemy submarine fleet might be bottled up by "fast carrier-plane" attacks against the bases for the underwater craft.

Friedman also maintained that American carriers could get to within 50 miles of Russia along the entire east coast of Siberia, around the north cape of Norway, in the Archangel and Leningrad area, through the Mediterranean and in the Aegean Sea around Greece.

THE ADMIRAL said carriers sent that close to enemy shores could launch planes able to penetrate as much as 550 miles inland. These aircraft, he pointed out, could deal with enemy planes which might in any way "challenge the control of the sea."

Friedman also made these other points:

1. Russia has three old battleships, about 15 cruisers and some 45 or 50 destroyers, in addition to "about 300" subs. By the end of 1952, the U.S. will have 12 large fast carriers, about 17 of the "little ones" used for anti-submarine warfare, 19 cruisers, four battleships, about 340 destroyers and destroyer-escort types, the amphibious lift to mount two Army divisions and associated auxiliaries—plus 100 submarines.

2. It is not probable that Russian submarines can launch any guided missiles or airplanes "at this stage of the game."

3. There is little chance that any potential enemy might threaten the U.S. seriously with intercontinental aircraft.

4. The fact that not one of America's 110 carriers operating during World War II was sunk by a bomb dropped by land-based aircraft indicates it would be just as difficult to destroy a carrier with an atom bomb.

5. The Navy has made "marked progress" in its anti-submarine efforts, but "it would be pretty tough going for a while" if about 25 submarines were let loose by the Communists off Korea.

6. An atomic fleet is "conceivable" within "a number of years" but it would probably be cheaper "to build from the bottom up" than to convert today's ships into atomic-powered vessels.

Another State Road Crumbles, Leader Claims

COLUMBUS, Oct. 1—Still another highway—U.S. 3 between Westerville and Mount Vernon—has been brought into the snow-balling row over the breakdown of new road projects.

Clarence L. Wetzel of Lisbon, Republican majority whip in the Ohio house, claims he called for an investigation of the U.S. 3 project after the road began cracking up 90 days after resurfacing with concrete.

He charged over the weekend that he showed Highway Director T. J. Kauer "pieces of cement and photographs" of the highway last April and was promised an investigation that never took place.

Wetzel called for a "state-wide examination" of Ohio roads last Wednesday after Kauer suspended 12 division 11 engineers at New Philadelphia because a new section of U.S. 36 crumbled in Tuscarawas County.

Five-hundred feet of new blacktop broke up under traffic near Newcomerstown 15 minutes after it was opened in late August.

Ten of the engineers were reinstated almost immediately but Charles H. Fritche, assistant division engineer, and E. Hogden Tilton, project engineer, still are under suspension.

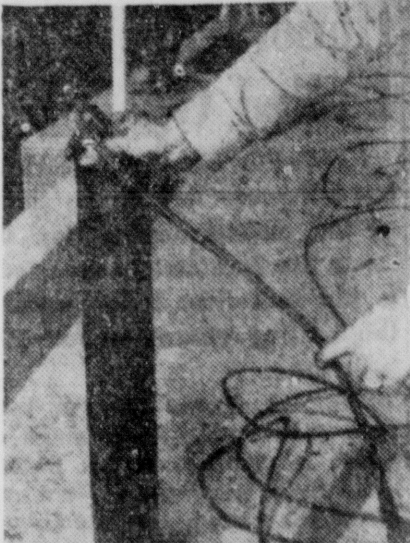

ELECTRIC CURRENT STOPS RUST ON SHIPS

By ANDREW R. BOONE
Central Press Correspondent
LONG BEACH, Cal.—Apply a little electricity to the hull of a ship, and the hull will remain almost rust-free.

Called cathodic protection, this corrosion-preventive was tried on the Navy's 1,000-ton floating drydock AFDL-12 off Long Beach.

Unlike painting, which requires constant inspection and maintenance, only a small amount of electric current protects the entire underwater hull.

To prepare the ship for the test, a copper line, called a buss, was run completely around her deck. For protection, a graphite anode, connected to the buss, was lowered to the bottom of the ocean. An 8-amp. rectifier forced current into the ship, which became the cathode.

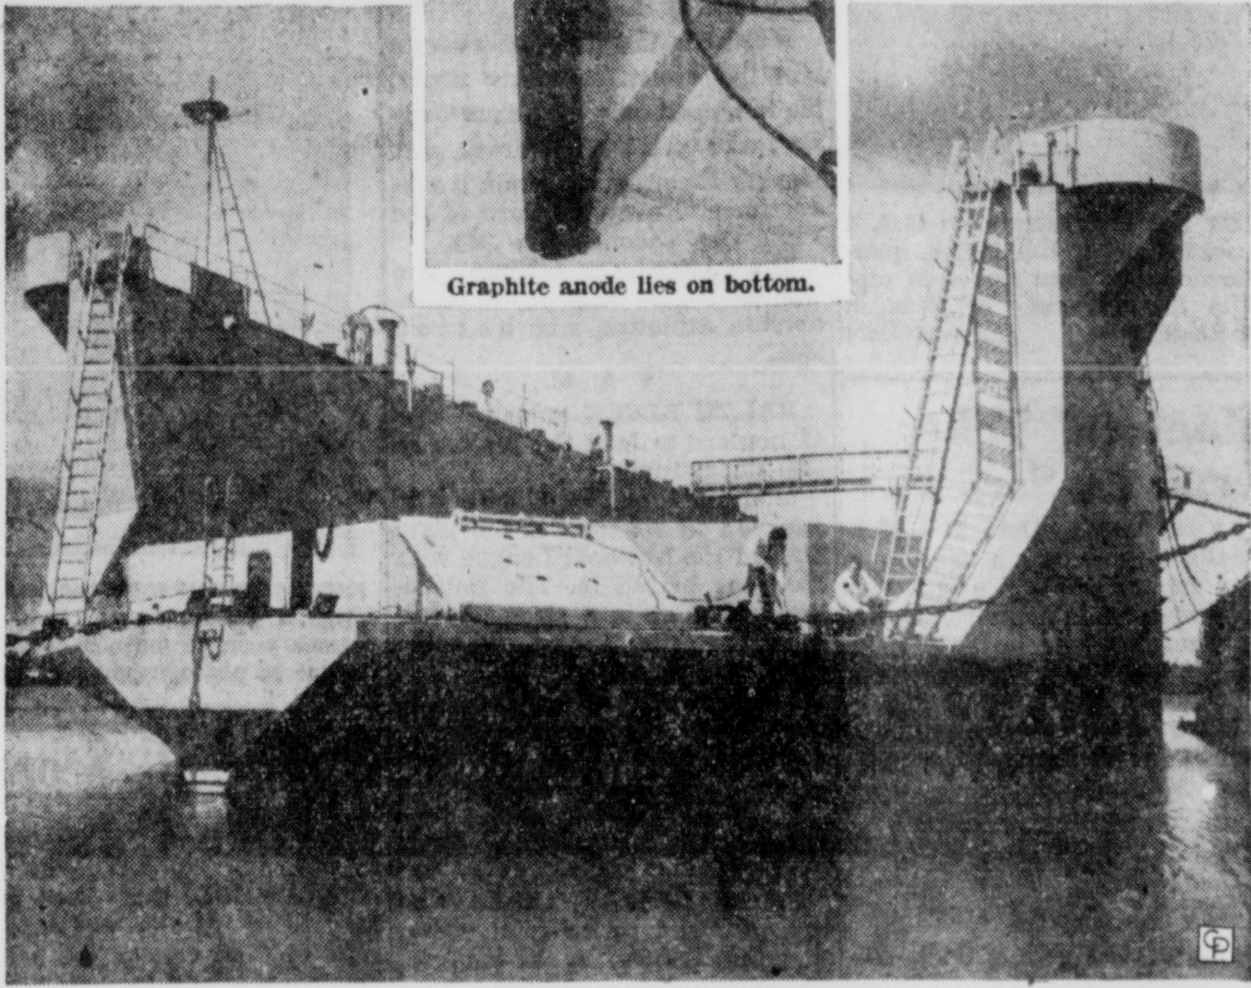

Graphite anode lies on bottom.

Sea organisms attached themselves to the bottom of the ship, but no rust appeared.

Tests proved so successful the U. S. Maritime commission is trying the stunt on vessels at sea. Magnesium anodes that make their own current are used. The Navy is considering laying big anode beds in harbors frequented by its ships. By tying into the anode circuit, a vessel automatically would be protected from rust while berthed.

A 1,000-ton floating drydock is the cathode of the electrical circuit. Test coupons lowered overboard reveal differences between cathodic protection with small current and none at all.

42 Dopers Due For Hearings

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1—Some 42 persons rounded up in narcotic raids in Northern Ohio will be arraigned today before Federal Judge Charles McNamee in Cleveland.

Sgt. Louis Kopacka, head of the Cleveland police narcotic squad, said two of the prisoners are "important dope peddlers." One was an Akron man believed to be a fugitive from another federal narcotic charge.

St. Louis Turns Clocks 'Ahead'

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1—Much of the nation returned to standard time yesterday by turning clocks back one hour—but not St. Louis.

The good burghers there were advised to set their timepieces eleven hours ahead. The net effect, of course, is the same.

The reason: Watchmakers advise it.

Young Chickens, Apples Due To Be Plentiful

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Agriculture Department specialists report fresh apples and young chickens will be in very heavy supply in October markets.

The peak of the harvest means ample supplies of apples for both cooking and eating, and a heavy carryover of canned apples and applesauce will help increase the totals.

Moreover, the specialists say stocks of processed apples should continue heavy because the largest apple crop this fall is expected in the northeast—which supplies most of this product to processors.

A supply of young chickens one third larger than a year ago means ample quantities, and fairly low prices for the nation's broiler and fryer consumers.

Teenage Bible Students Go On Crime Spree

KEARNEY, Neb., Oct. 1—Two teenage Bible students who kidnaped five persons and stole four cars in a three-state crime spree today blamed a movie and "too much religion" for their actions.

The youths, Arnold L. Lingo, 15, of San Antonio, Tex., and Marvin A. Law, 16, of Oshkosh, Neb., pleaded guilty in Buffalo County court to charges of kidnapping and car theft after they were captured near Shelton, Neb.

Young Lingo told officers: "All I ever did when I was home was go to church. I went three times a week and again on Sunday. Religion is not good when you get to fighting it as hard as I did."

The young gunmen said they went to a movie and saw Robert Mitchum portray a gambler "who didn't like cops much."

After the movie they kidnaped a Colorado taxi driver and a motorist, robbed both at gunpoint and pistol-whipped one. Then they continued their crime spree through Kansas and Nebraska until they were cowed by the gunfire of Kearney police.

Wets Urge Shun Of Red Products

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1—Six major veterans groups, with their eye on the approaching Christmas shopping season, urged all Americans today to boycott goods produced in Iron Curtain countries.

The organizations agreed to launch a year-round nationwide campaign aimed at discouraging the purchase of articles imported from any Communist country.

The veterans' groups included the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, American Veterans of World War II, Catholic War Veterans, Jewish War Veterans, and the United Spanish War Veterans.

Governors Holding Conference, Mention Ike As GOP Candidate

GATLINBURG, Tenn., Oct. 1. —Presidential candidate talk dominated by the name of Gen. Eisenhower gave way to a sober discussion of defense mobilization today at the 43rd annual governors' conference.

Gov. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois called upon the governors to give "spirited and positive leadership" to the current national effort.

He presided at a panel discussion attended by Gen. George C. Marshall, retired defense secretary, Defense Mobilizer Charles E. Wilson, and Civil Defense Administrator Millard Caldwell.

Tonight the governors hear an address by Ambassador John Foster Dulles, foreign policy adviser in the State Department and chief architect of the Japanese peace treaty. But there was plenty of practical politics in the crisp autumn air of this Smoky Mountains resort.

Sokolsky's These Days

For 13 years after that, I lived and worked in China. Many of the names you now read about, I knew as young men and women, my own age. My associations with Sun Yat-sen were close. I knew Chiang Kai-shek before he became a figure. I knew many of the present Communist leaders as far back as 1919 when I was adviser to the Shanghai Students Union, whose scroll still hangs on my wall.

But the question of human liberty and country and God was not answered in China. Our troops today speak of the brutality of the Oriental, their habit of shooting the sick and wounded and prisoners of war.

And always it came to me: From what is derived mercy, compassion, pity, charity, love? Can men be free without God?

To understand my own necessity for God, I read and studied the enemy, I devoted myself to every biologic and physical evidence of the futility of the supernatural. But it did not do in the realm of man's relationship to man. For the most that Karl Marx could establish was that those men and those things survived which struggled hardest in a suitable environment to survive. Yet, I also witnessed the elevation of the spirit of love daily in the works of compassionate men who lived in freedom.

In my own country, the United States, I knew freedom. I also knew God. Of course, any human society has faults—but I could say in 1931, in the depth of the Depression, that I could find no condition of life in America, material or spiritual, that was as unfavorable as that to which I had for 14 years become accustomed in Russia and Asia.

Tooth Decay Cuts Cow's Output

Ivan H. Loughary, dairy specialist, reports too many dairymen neglect dental care of their cows. When a cow is about two or three years old, the second set of teeth come in.

Occasionally, one or more of these may come in crooked and when this occurs the cow will not eat well and her production is retarded. Proper care by a veterinarian will eliminate this defect in many dairy herds.

New Vaccines May Speed Hog Cholera Eradication, Belief

Vets' Parley Hears Of Development

Final Judgment Being Reserved

Although livestock disease control officials are refraining from predictions, the word is getting around unofficially that swine raisers can soon expect a great change in the methods of controlling hog cholera.

Nearly 2,000 veterinarians who heard a first-hand report on newly developed hog cholera vaccines at the American Veterinary Medical Association's recent national convention in Milwaukee came away convinced that the products deserve a full and extended trial.

Research that led to the production of the new-type vaccines, all of which are made from a modified live virus, dates back several years, but this is the first year that the products will get into wide use in farm herds.

Even so, distribution will be carefully regulated at first because the manufacturers and federal licensing authorities want to avoid slip-ups that might cloud final evaluation of the products. For this reason, primary emphasis will be on use directly by or under the supervision of a veterinarian.

RESTRICTIONS being imposed on the marketing and distribution of the products will not be removed until extensive laboratory and field trials have shown them to be both safe and efficient under farm conditions, the AVMA convention was told by Dr. James A. Baker of Ithaca, N. Y., a research veterinarian who did the original basic work on the vaccines.

Not all manufacturers use exactly the same technique or the same formula, but a basic step is preliminary multiple passage of a "hot" hog cholera virus through rabbits. The new products differ mainly from the now widely used serum and virus method of immunization—the so-called simultaneous method—in that there is said to be no danger of spreading the disease through their use.

After being processed through rabbits, the virus is still lively enough to give pigs solid immunity against hog cholera for about six months or possibly longer, yet enough of its deadly punch is removed to keep it from causing active disease in unvaccinated animals that are exposed to it.

Manufacturers, three of which already have started to market the new vaccines, admit that much more testing will be needed to learn all of the facts and that final judgment must await extended farm use.

As with other immunizing agents, the animals to be vaccinated should be in good general health, adequately nourished, and relatively free of infection with internal parasites, they emphasize.

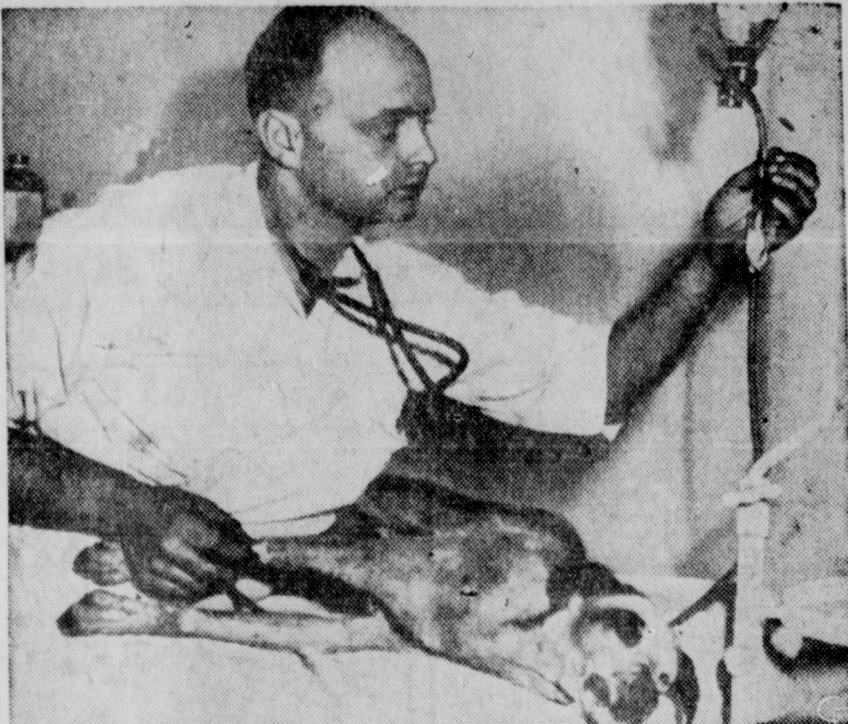

200 Chaplains To Hold Parley In Lancaster

LANCASTER, Oct. 1.—Approximately 200 chaplains from some 20 states will be here Wednesday and Thursday to attend the fourth annual meeting of the National Association of Training School Chaplains at Boys' Industrial School.

Highlight of the confab will be a panel discussion "dealing with the relationship of the institutional chaplain with the local pastor or priest."

Speakers will include Judge Henry J. Robison, assistant director of the state department of welfare, and Judge John H. Lamneck, public welfare director.

One aim of the NATSC "is to unite the chaplains of all training schools in the U.S. and Canada in order that the resultant organization can emphasize the importance of religion and the chaplain in the training and rehabilitation of youth."

DEXTROSE IS ADMINISTERED by Chicago physician J. Seligman to Spotty, 20-pound fox terrier who apparently was clubbed into insensibility when he tried to rout burglars from his master's gas station. A safe containing nothing of value was stolen. Blood was found on the floor but the dog suffered no open wounds. (International Soundphoto)

Armenian Church Breaks Away From Soviet 'Mother'

FRESNO, Cal., Oct. 1.—An Armenian church in Fresno has broken away from its mother church in Soviet Armenia on the grounds its directives were Soviet propaganda and that heads of the church are "prisoners of Russia."

The rupture was made by the Armenian Holy Trinity church, whose congregation voted unanimously on the issue at a special meeting.

Rev. Igehishe Nekahitarian, pastor of the church, declared the directives were against the American government and American policies and that the mother church was being used as a propaganda agency by the Soviet government.

The pastor said it is felt the catholics (heads of the church) are virtually prisoners of the Soviet government.

The congregation was told of several directives received from the holy see in Armenia. One directive ordered the church to denounce what the Communists call American aggression in Korea and demand withdrawal of United Nations troops from Korea.

Another directive called upon the congregation in America to observe the anniversary of the date Armenia joined the Soviet Union, which falls on Nov. 29. An earlier directive called on support of the Communist-sponsored Stockholm peace plan.
